Nigeria: Same-Sex Marriage (Prohibition) Act

On 7 January 2014, Nigerian President Jonathan Goodluck signed his assent to the Same-Sex Marriage (Prohibition) Act (SSMPA). Several elements of this legislation contravene Nigeria’s Constitution as well as its binding international obligations, which guarantee fundamental rights to dignity, equality, non-discrimination, privacy, freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention and freedom of expression and association.

Under pre-existing law, Nigeria already criminalises consensual same-sex sexual activity in private which attracts a maximum penalty of 14 years imprisonment.\(^1\)

In addition to violating a number of fundamental human rights, criminalisation of homosexuality has been recognised by experts as seriously impeding public health outcomes, in particular the prevention and treatment of HIV and AIDS.\(^2\) Such laws hinder the effectiveness of strategies and measures designed to contain the HIV epidemic.

The final official version of the SSMPA has not been made public. This briefing is based on a review of previous versions of the SSMPA in its Bill form and a Conference Committee Report by a Parliamentary Committee established to harmonise various versions of the Bill.\(^3\) Until the legislation is made publicly available, the information outlined here is not guaranteed as authoritative and should be treated with appropriate caution.

Same-Sex Marriage and Civil Unions

The SSMPA provides that:

1. Only marriages\(^4\) contracted between a man and a woman shall be recognised as valid in Nigeria.\(^5\)
2. Any marriage contract or civil union\(^6\) entered into between persons of the same sex is prohibited.\(^7\)

\(^4\) ‘Marriage’ is defined as a legal union entered into between persons of the opposite sex in accordance with the Marriage Act, Islamic Law or Customary Law (section 7).

\(^5\) Section 3.
- A marriage contract or civil union entered into between persons of the same sex is invalid and illegal and shall not be recognised as entitled to benefits of a valid marriage.\(^8\)

- Marriage contracts or civil unions entered into between persons of the same sex by virtue of a certificate issued by a foreign country is void in Nigeria, and any benefits accruing there from by virtue of the certificate shall not be enforced by any court of law in Nigeria.\(^9\)

- Marriage or civil union entered into between persons of the same sex shall not be solemnised in any place of worship either Church or Mosque or any other place whatsoever called in Nigeria.\(^10\) No such certificate shall be valid in Nigeria.\(^11\)

Other Prohibited Conduct

The SSMPA also criminalises a number of activities associated with homosexual identity including free association through ‘gay’ organisations. This includes prohibitions on:

- Registering gay clubs, societies and organisations, and their sustenance, processions and meetings.\(^12\)

- Public showing of same sex amorous relationships directly or indirectly.\(^13\)

Penalties

The penalties for engaging in the prohibited activities proscribed in the SSMPA are as follows:

Reactions

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Navi Pillay has denounced the SSMPA as "draconian" for "making an already-bad situation much worse" adding, "rarely have I seen a piece of legislation that in so few paragraphs directly violates so many basic, universal human rights". As Pillay observes, the legislation:

purports to ban same-sex marriage ceremonies but in reality does much more. It turns anyone who takes part in, witnesses or helps organize a same sex marriage into a criminal. It punishes people for displaying any affection in public towards someone of the same sex. And in banning gay organizations it puts at risk the vital work of human rights defenders who speak up for the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender (LGBT) and intersex people.

Pillay warns that the law “risks reinforcing existing prejudices towards members of the LGBT community, and may provoke an upsurge in violence and discrimination.”

UNAIDS

According to the Joint UN Programme on HIV and AIDS (UNAIDS), Nigeria currently has the second largest HIV epidemic globally. In 2012, an estimated 3.4 million people were living with HIV in Nigeria. In 2010, national HIV prevalence in the country was estimated at 4 per cent among the general population and 17 per cent among men who have sex with men.

UNAIDS and the UN-backed Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria have warned that the further criminalisation of LGBT people in other spheres of their lives under the SSMPA could lead to a further deterioration of the HIV epidemic in Nigeria.

UNAIDS Executive Director, Michel Sidibé, noted:

The provisions of the new law in Nigeria could lead to increased homophobia, discrimination, denial of HIV services and violence based on real or perceived sexual orientation and gender identity … It could also be used against organizations working to provide HIV prevention and treatment services to LGBT people.

More on the response of UNAIDS to the SSMPA can be viewed here.
